REIGN OF TERROR.

The Massacre at Odessa.

The suburb of Dalmik, where disturbances were reported recently, says the Daily Mirror, has been the scene of the most fearful carnage. All the Jewish houses and shops have been plundered and burnt.Some tragic episodes of the reign of Anarchy are now coming to light.A band of hooligans appeared before the Jewish Agricultural School and demanded money. The headmistress gave them all she had on condition that the lives of thirty-five orphan pupils should be spared, and induced the men to depart. They reappeared later, however, and ransacked the school. The children fled, pursued by the cowardly ruffians, and eight of them were killed.A band headed by a policeman forced its way into the dwelling of the Rabbi Sloves, and demanded the key of his safe.The Rabbi replied that the money in the safe belonged not to him but widows and orphans. Intimidated, the miscreants stripped him to the skin and put him to terrible torment. The Rabbi still stubbornly refusing to hand them the key, one of the gang raised his axe, and was about to behead him when his wife surrendered the key, hoping to save her husband's life.After pillaging the house and removing 2,200 roubles from the safe, the band killed both the Rabbi and his wife.Indescribable scenes were witnessed in connection with the funeral of the Jewish victims of the disorders, who number 412.Vast crowds gathered in the cemetery, Many women fainted, and the air was rent with sobs of despair. As a sign of mourning all Jewish shops and even many Christian establishments were closed. The bodies are being buried in huge graves containing seventy corpses each and the sad work will continue for three days.Two hundred and forty-four corpses have not been identified, the faces having been battered out of all recognition by hammer.

THE YARN MARKET.

Messrs Cavanah Pallas and Co., report under date of December 15: "Since the issue of our last report on the last installment of our yarn market, the early part of the interval continued unchanged, and a quiet but steady business was being effected at previous low rates, when the recent decline in exchange encouraged dealers to again enter the market and commence buying freely and an extensive business has resulted. Holders now because firmer and succeeded in establishing an advance of $1 to $3 per bale. Subsequently on the recovery in exchange buyers

THE GROWING SENSE OF PATRIOTISM.

Hopeful Speech by Lord Roberts.

Earl Roberts while opening a new indoor rifle range adjoining the Borough of Wandsworth Rifle Club, at Garret Park, Earlsfield, said that the Volunteers were taking a right view of that movement, and instead of thinking that the rifle club would tend to deplete their ranks they believed that the club would train boys so that when they enlisted as Volunteers they would already have a knowledge of rifle shooting. A patriotic club had been started at Hampton to provide a central organization for aiding by gentle from its fund any rifle clubs or other associations which might be formed in the borough for drilling and training marksmen, and for other patriotic purposes. A movement had also been started at Bristol within the past few days which had very great possibilities. It was one by which football, cycling, gymnastics, cricket, and other athletic clubs should be encouraged to form a rifle shooting branch. The Bristol Wheelers' Cycling Club started such a branch last year and it had been a great success. A great league was also in process of formation at Newcastle, to be called the Tyne-side Factories' League, for the training in shooting of those engaged in shipyards, factories, and engineering works, and it had been reported to him that it, as had been anticipated, the galleries came in as well as the factories, there would be a nominal roll of many thousands. The Rev. T. G. Wilson had enrolled 2000 of the 'boiligan' class at Plaitow, to give them training in drill, discipline, miniature rifle shooting, and camp life. All that was, he thought, most satisfactory, and showed that the country was taking up the matter in a serious way which encouraged him to hope that he might see his earnest wish fulfilled that every town, hamlet, and village should possess its own rifle club.
